

Earth Sabbath, Earth Justice: Protecting God's Gifts of Food and Fuel

Presbyterians for Restoring Creation (PRC) 6th National Conference
October 25-28, 2007
Mo-Ranch Presbyterian Center (Hunt, TX)

We invite you to explore with us ways to live faithfully in this critical time of climate change and increasing disparity between rich and poor. Come, gather with us as we address these global trends through the lens of our relationship to, and choices about, food and energy.

Come, gather with us as we:

- Look toward just means of developing, growing, and distributing food
- Seek ways to develop and use alternative and traditional fuel sources more responsibly, without further polluting or destroying the Creation or contributing to global warming
- Share strategies and skills to develop sustainable lifestyles, corporate responsibility, and just ways of relating as earth community

In gratitude, we hold the earth in trust. In love and compassion, we seek to reflect God's love throughout Creation. As children of God, we work to create beauty, order, health, and peace for all creatures. In celebration, we gather as a community of faith through worship, dance, music, and the arts.

Join together with people of faith across the nation and from all walks of life—pastors, educators, students, lay leaders, activists, and scientists—for this 6th national eco-justice conference of Presbyterians for Restoring Creation. Through worship, workshops, plenaries, reflection groups, and field trips we will explore our theme of just and sustainable food and energy sources for all of God's Creation.
